JAPAN TEACHES HER PEOPLE THAT SHE MUST FIGHT FOR LIFE AGAINST WHITE WORLD WHICH NOW SEEKS TO CRUSH HER

Japanese Believe Japan Was Attacked by China at England's Instigation and That England and Soviet Union Are Helping China—60,000 Arrested for "Dangerous Thinking."

(Note: The people of Japan are determined to make theirs "the greatest nation ever known," H. R. Knickerbocker, the noted foreign correspondent of International News Service, disclosed in the following article. In this, the seventh of a series "The Yellow Typhoon and the Red Storm Warnings," Knickerbocker tells of the driving ambition behind Japan's campaign of expansion as evidenced in cities he visited on a 12,500-mile trip across Asia and Europe on his way back to Paris after months spent in covering the war in Shanghai.)

PARIS, Jan. 24.—(INS)—Tokio teaches why Japan is at war now with China and may be at war tomorrow with any one of the three great nations she considers her potential enemies, Soviet Russia, Great Britain or America.

Seventy million Japanese believe that Japan is fighting a righteous war of self-defense in China, and that she must fight for her life against the white world which wants to crush her. They believe Japan was attacked by China at England's instigation and that England as well as the Soviet Union is helping China, illegally and contrary to the laws of neutrality, out of envy and fear of Japan.

They believe that Chiang Kai-Shek, who is about as Communist as General Iwane Matsui or the Japanese Emperor himself, is a red gangster whose armed thugs deliberately murdered Japanese officers and soldiers and massacred hundreds of Japanese civilians. They believe that if they had not made war on China every Japanese on the continent would have been slaughtered by the Chinese.

They believe that America is an arrogant but pusillanimous nation with a big head, inordinate greed, a second-class navy, and a great fear of Japan. They are still deeply insulted by our exclusion of Japanese immigrants. They believe they have already outstripped us in our own talent, for applied science, mechanics and industry. They agree with the Chinese that we have no culture.

They believe that the Yamato race, as they call it, has a cosmic mission, to purify the world with the Yamato spirit. They believe the white race is degenerate, cowardly, pacifistic and that it is the divine duty of Japan to take that leadership of humanity which up until now the whites have exercised.

Above all, they truly believe that their Emperor is a god and since he is a Japanese god, peace and heavenly contentment throughout the earth can only come when his divine majesty rules all mankind.

Sixty-five thousand police help the Japanese believe these articles of faith, but the task of the police is easy. They have only had to arrest sixty thousand Japanese for "dangerous thinking" in the last decade. Every year, by natural increase, more than one million more Japanese are added to the right-thinking seventy million.

They look at those population statistics, and declare they must have more room, then must have more babies to fill up the room, and then still more territory for the extra babies, and so on without limit until Japan becomes the greatest nation ever known.

Around this regimented nation is a wall so high, so thick, that not the faintest vestige of a foreign thought, or information, or criticism can penetrate. Chief element in this wall is the Japanese language. It automatically seals the vast mass of the population away from any contact with the foreign world.

No Japanese in Japan can hear or read an objective account of events abroad. It is a prison offense to listen to a foreign radio program. Nobody but ambassadors are permitted to keep radio sets strong enough to receive foreign broadcasts. Even they are forbidden to allow their embassy staffs to listen in.

When I arrived in Kobe, the customs authorities took away from me every scrap of printed matter in English about China. Every traveler was required to hand in, in advance, a detailed list of every book, periodical and pamphlet with a description of its contents. One French newspaperman who was moving to Tokyo with his library had to stay over in Kobe two days to prepare the list of his books.

The press is rigidly censored, and although the Japanese journalists are among the most enlightened of the population, and probably indulge in many "dangerous thoughts" because all journalists in every land hate police repression, they nevertheless have no opportunity to inform themselves about the true state of affairs abroad.

Their only chance to do so is by intercourse with foreigners, and for that as well as other reasons the Japanese authorities are bent now upon eliminating as far as possible all whites from the country. The long-range policy of Asia for the Asiatics, is paralleled by the local policy of Japan for the Japanese. By police measures, taxation, laws against the acquisition of property by foreigners, and the growth in the population of a fierce anti-foreign feeling, the despised white it is hoped will eventually be pushed out.

COULEE DAM TO PROVIDE CHEAP ELECTRIC POWER

Power, It Is Estimated, Can Be Sold Profitably at A Very Low Rate

WILL COVER WIDE AREA

(Note: This is the last of three articles on construction of Grand Coulee Dam, the "biggest thing in the world." It covers power to be generated by the huge project.)

By Wilfred Brown
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

COULEE DAM, Wash., Jan. 24.—(INS)—What will be done with the huge quantities of power produced by the water rushing through the turbines of Grand Coulee Dam?

The eighteen turbines in the two power houses will produce, at capacity, an estimated 3,200,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity annually. Power produced by secondary plants, along irrigation canals of the Columbia Basin project, will total 4,200,000,000 kilowatt-hours, of which more than half will be used for pumping.

The output of electricity at the main dam will be more than double the total amount generated in 1930 in its natural market area of Washington, Northern Oregon, Northern Idaho and Western Montana.

Nevertheless, Bureau of Reclamation engineers estimate that there will be a demand for all the power Grand Coulee can produce within 15 years from the time the dam is completed in 1942.

During the 10-year period ending in

Begin Probe Today Into Cause of Nine Explosions

DEEP WATER POINT, N. J., Jan. 24.—(INS)—State and Company authorities today opened investigations to determine the cause of a series of nine explosions which destroyed the synthetic rubber plant of the duPont company's dye works here before dawn Sunday.

Charles Forsyth, 28, of Central Park, was killed; Ray Hale, 30, foreman of the night shift, was burned critically, and the body of Earl Hale, 31, missing since the blasts, was being sought in the fire-twisted wreckage. Damage was variously estimated at between $100,000 and $300,000.

The tremendous explosions, originating in nine towering acetylene tanks, occurred one-minute apart. They rocked a four-mile area in which thousands of windows were shattered and were felt as far north as Philadelphia, on the opposite banks of the Delaware river and 25 miles away.

Today, officially, there had been no explanation of the blasts and William Kirk, assistant manager of the plant, said there might be none for days, if ever. "We have no way of determining the origin of the explosions until we can make a thorough examination of the ruins," Kirk reported. "That may be several days, possibly never."

Out To Smash Filibuster

Washington, Jan. 24.—Driving to smash Dixie's filibuster against the anti-lynching bill and open the way for action on the administration's legislative program, Democratic leaders planned to run today's session far into the night.

As the filibuster went into its 15th day today, the filibusters showed no sign of weakening. They were prepared, they said, to talk the bill to death. Their strategy has been laid for every member of the opposition camp to take his turn in holding the floor against a vote.

Pay Death Penalty

Fort Madison, Ia., Jan. 24.—With one of them actually smiling on the gallows, John M. Mercer, 29, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Allen B. Wheaton, 21, of Rapid City, S. D., quietly paid with their lives today for Iowan murders they committed separately in 1931 and 1936.

They were plunged simultaneously through parallel trap doors on a 20-ft. scaffold. The two were dead within 23 minutes. The two hangings expedited the murders of Robert G. Stroet, Tipton, Ia., a vigilante whom Mercer shot down August 8th, 1930, while fleeing a Davenport, Ia., drugstore hold-up; and Henry Plummer, of Council Bluffs, Ia., an oil station proprietor, whom Wheaton ruthlessly killed June 11th, 1936, after kidnapping and robbing him.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

Strange Palace Politics

Washington, Jan. 22. AS said in this place the other day, the extraordinary way in which the politics of the Administration has recently developed, is as confusing to many as the simultaneous White House advocacy of obviously conflicting economic policies. If there is a way of reconciling with reason what is now going on politically it would be interesting to have it presented.

FOR EXAMPLE, there is the amazing spectacle of the President, quite clearly without the approval, acquiescence or co-operation (which certainly seems essential) of his political generalissimo and close personal friend, Mr. James A. Farley, backing the New York gubernatorial aspirations of one of his radical young friends and subordinates—Mr. Robert H. Jackson. As has been pointed out, it is obvious that if Mr. Jackson should be nominated and elected Governor of New York in 1938, he would have an advantage over other aspirants for the Presidential nomination in 1940. This fact has greatly pained the other aspirants, some of whom are not exactly suffering in silence. What grieves them most is the inescapable nature of the conviction that Mr. Roosevelt has picked Mr. Jackson as his successor.

UPON NO other theory can they explain the situation. They know, of course, that if it were not for Roosevelt backing, Mr. Jackson would not have a ghost of a

May Obtain Duplicate Social Security Cards

Wage earners who have lost their social security account number cards may now obtain duplicates from field offices of the Social Security Board, the Board announced today. Field offices are located in 323 key cities. Formerly duplicates of account number cards, issued in connection with the Federal old-age insurance program, could be obtained only from Washington. The Board has now instructed field office managers to issue duplicates, upon proper identification, to workers who have lost their cards.

This service to workers who have lost their cards has been established to help them obtain employment. Reports from all parts of the country indicate, the Board explained, that employers are giving preference to job applicants having account number cards. This may be due to the fact that if an employee fails to obtain an account number the employer must, under Federal Treasury regulations, apply for a number for this worker. The employer is required to include both the worker's name and his account number in periodic reports of the worker's wages which he files with the Treasury.

Field office managers have been instructed by the Board to obtain the home address and the name and address of the employer of persons requesting duplicate cards. It was explained that this additional information is required so that, if it is found necessary, the Board can communicate with the wage earner or his employer.

MAKE PLANS TO INCREASE NUMBER OF SCOUT LEADERS

Necessity of Trained Men as Leaders is Discussed At Meeting

51% IS NOW TRAINED

Fifty-one per cent of the leaders of the Cub Packs, Scout Troops, and Seascout Ships of the Bucks County Scouting Council have taken training to make their work with youth more effective. These facts were given by Field Commissioners Jack Burgess of Morrisville for the Lower Area, and Walter V. Rutherford, Doylestown, for the Upper Area during the meeting of the training committee of the Council at the home of Walter W. Pitzonka on Friday evening.

Plans to increase the number of trained leaders were made. During the months of February, March and April there will be Scouting Universities of Training at Bristol and Doylestown. A special training conference is to be conducted at Doylestown for the entire Council during March. There will be another Council gathering of leaders at the Buccoo Week-end Training Camp in May.

Samuel K. Faust, superintendent of Bensalem Township Schools is taking an important part in the training plans. Annually, Mr. Faust directs one of the educational courses. Last year, he gave "Psychology of Youth," and for 1938 it will be "Recreational Methods." The exceptional values of the training camp were emphasized by Mr. Faust in his comment "We were in the company of men who were trained and tried in their experiences."

Program outlines for the conference and week-end camp were given by Scout Executive William F. Livermore. Suggestions for Seascouting were given by Field Commissioner A. B. Stiles, Boy Scouting by District Commissioner Herbert A. Pettit, and Cubbing by Field Commissioner F. H. Schmidt of Perkasio. Rev. Ernest Vandenberg of Hartsville spoke of the spiritual opportunities. Neighborhood Commissioner S. A. Miller of South Langhorne gave some suggestions of how to increase the attendance.

Training Chairman Walter W. Pitzonka led the discussion of the specialization courses to be offered. It was

Japan Teaches Her People She Must Fight For Life Against White World

They are getting out at the rate of 1,000 a year, and since Japan, of all the great powers, has by far the fewest foreigners, statistically within ten years every single white ought to be eliminated. To judge from the movement of whites out of Japan from the years 1930 to 1934, the last on record, Japan ought to be clean of all whites by the end of 1944.

Such complete perfection of course is not to be expected, but in 1930 there were 14,000 whites and in 1934 only 9,900 in Japan. Americans and British are being squeezed out most swiftly. The entire American population of Japan, according to official Japanese reports, receded from 3,640 in 1930 to 2,082 in 1934, and is doubtless much smaller now. The British declined from 3,144 to 1,953. Compared to these figures, the United States, for all its exclusion of Asiatic immigration, has an enormous Japanese population, namely 147,000.

Japan is rapidly approaching the condition of purity from contact with the contaminating foreigner which existed when the hermit empire was visited by the American Commodore Perry in 1853.

Thus it is easy for the Japanese government to tell the Japanese people anything it likes and be confident that 99 per cent of the population will believe it. Today the number one bogey is Communism, and every enemy of Japan is denominated Communist.

Yet the Communist party put an insuperable obstacle in its own path by rejecting the Emperor. Had the Nippon Communists been shrewd enough to include the Emperor in their plans, which could have been done with much less trouble than might appear to Western eyes, they might have utilized the burning devotion of the ultra-patriotic youth for their own purposes, and bent the Japanese religion of state and emperor worship into Marxist form.

But like every foreign Communist party, the Nipponese had to follow the cast-iron formula of Moscow's Communist International, with the result that, having rejected the Emperor, they were rejected by the people. Their leaders were all arrested in 1928, and subsequent new leaders jailed in the gigantic police raids of 1931. Communism has no chance in Japan until and unless Japan suffers a crushing military defeat. Especially if the Soviet Union were to defeat Japan the chances for complete destruction of the present Japanese system, including the throne, and the coming of a Communist revolution, might in the opinion of most observers, be great.

As it is, the term Communist is now an epithet applied indiscriminately to all anti-imperial groups within Japan and to enemy nations without. This goes so far that we may be sure if we were ill-fated enough to have to go to war with Japan the Japanese people would be told that America is a Communist country. And if Great Britain were the enemy, it would be that dangerous red, George VI, whom every patriotic Japanese would have to hate as an enemy of society.

Meanwhile the Soviet Union, by and large, is the number one enemy for most Japanese. I took the night train from Tokyo to Tsuruga, a little port of 19,000 population on the north coast of Japan, to embark on the S. S. "Siberia Maru," an 8,000 ton freighter, for Vladivostok. In Tsuruga I saw the face of true Japan, unblemished by foreigners.

It was an attractive face in many ways. The shops were so neat, the men and women so cheerful and industrious, the supplies of food so attractively displayed that even this comparatively poor little town made a bright impression. I found two Japanese who spoke English, one the political policeman who traced me down and left me alone not one minute of my waking hours from the moment of arrival until he waved goodbye, and the other a local correspondent.

The plainclothes man was classically Japanese. For three hours he quizzed me in my cabin about everything from the number of my children to the climate of my birthplace. Finally, when he asked me why the International News Service was called international, and wasn't that highly suspicious, and wasn't it pretty good proof that I must be a Red, I laughed so hard that it hurt his feelings.

To make it up I asked him to guide me to the Shinto Temple. Through a snowstorm we trudged across the village. The Japanese newspaperman joined us. Women and children ran out on their wooden clogs to look at the foreigner. At the temple we stood under a bare root hung with hundreds of strips of paper, each a prayer for a Japanese soldier in China.

1930, power consumption in the area increased 9.5 per cent annually. It declined during the depression years, but was back at its top level by 1934, and since then has resumed the same rate of increase.

Should the increasing demand slow down to four per cent annually during the next 30 years—a conservative estimate, the engineers believe—Grand Coulee could supply barely half of the power used, in addition to all now produced.

The pumping of water from the dammed Columbia into the Grand Coulee storage basin will require a huge quantity of power. Development of the Columbia Basin, with its estimated ultimate population of over 400,000, will absorb much more. Industries using large quantities of power—such as metallurgy—may be attracted into the Northwest by cheap rates.

Power from the dam, it is estimated, can be sold profitably at the almost unbelievably low rate of two and a fourth mills, less than a quarter cent, per kilowatt-hour. (In Seattle, where rates are considered low, electricity costs householders a basic rate of five cents a kilowatt-hour.)

That is the cost at the dam. Distribution by wire, over a 300-mile radius, of course, will materially increase the final price. Co-operative power districts, such as are authorized by law in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, may purchase a large part of the output.

If the power available at Grand Coulee can be sold at two and a quarter mills on the spot, engineers estimate, the entire cost of the dam and power plant will be liquidated with 4 per cent interest in 50 years, and there will be a surplus of $144,500,000 to partially liquidate the cost of the irrigation system.

After the fiftieth year the annual surplus is estimated at $15,000,000.

Grand Coulee is the largest of ten dams planned for ultimate development of the Columbia river, if economic conditions warrant. Bonneville Dam, at head of tide water near Portland, Ore., is nearly completed.

Of incidental interest at the dam site is the town of Matson City, built by the contractor. It is a town literally without a chimney. All of the dormitories, stores and small houses are heated by electricity—not produced by the Columbia but brought in over wires from the Washington Water Power Company's plants.

Because of the great quantities of power purchased for operation of machinery, the contracting company found electrical heating the most economical. The town is located on the Colville Indian reservation, and must be moved when the dam is completed.

"And you can't salvage much out of a chimney," one official said.

chance for Governor, and they know—because there was never anything more obvious—that where the feverish Mr. Jackson is not thickly covered with a Gubernatorial rash he is all broken out with Presidential bee stings. As an amused observer said the other day, "He thinks he's in now." It isn't necessary to tell the politicians what this all adds up to. They know and not many of them like it. For one thing it is altogether too hand-picked to be palatable. For another, young Mr. Jackson is just a trifle "to unani-mous," as they say on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. For another, Mr. Farley has far too many friends in the Administration and out of it, in the Democratic party generally and in New York particularly, for them not to feel some resentment (not, it is fair to say, in the least fostered by him) at what seems an inexplicable elimination.

NO WORD of complaint has come from Mr. Farley and probably none will ever come. He has been—and is—far more loyal to Mr. Roosevelt than all the Jacksons, Corcorans, Cohens and other Brain Trusters combined, some of whom have lost few opportunities for his disparagement. He has served the President more faithfully and done him infinitely greater good. He has taken a tremendous lot of journalistic punishment with a smile, urbanely accepted blame which was not really his, built up a great political organization which only he knows how to make function fully. In other words, wholly aside from his Cabinet position, Mr. Farley is an outstanding Administration figure, and the idea of knocking him on any White House political policy—particularly one connected with his own State of New York, where he still happens to be Democratic State chairman—certainly seems absurd.

YET, amazing as it seems, to some extent at least, that—or something pretty close to that—has happened in connection with this Jackson candidacy. It may be that Mr. Farley cannot afford, as his friends assert, to make the fight for or even take the Governorship, much as he would like it. Perhaps Mr. Farley has not been pushed aside. None the less, his closest friends know that he was not consulted about the Jackson candidacy and is not a part of that movement. It was reported that Mr. Jackson is "all right with me" and that he would "go along." But that happens not to be true. He has let his friends in New York politics—including other aspirants—know that he is not committed and furthermore is not going to be committed.

IT IS A curious state of affairs. That the President and his Postmaster General, who is not only national chairman but State chairman, too, should not see eye to eye in as vital a political matter as the

New York Governorship is almost incredible. Yet, it is obvious on the surface that such is the fact—and beneath the surface it is more obvious and more interesting. Clearly, the Jackson hope is that soon or late the President will put pressure enough on Mr. Farley to swing him into line. Perhaps he can and will. And perhaps Mr. Farley, loyal though he is, just won't be swung. Stranger things have happened—and not many observers think Mr. Jackson, hot favorite of the President, and of Mr. Dubinski, the labor leader, as it is claimed he is, can be nominated in a Democratic convention without the Farley organization. Despite the new mark of Presidential esteem in making Mr. Jackson Solicitor General in the place of Mr. Reed, close observers believe his candidacy has fallen a little flat. Some think it will continue flat and that soon or late the White House interest in Mr. Jackson's candidacy will evaporate to the point where it can be asserted it never existed.

CORRECTION

IN this column the other day the statement was made that the question which prompted Mr. Roosevelt's press conference declaration against all holding companies was "planted." This was incorrect. The question was asked by Mr. Raymond P. Brandt, of the St. Louis "Post-Dispatch," who does not ask planted questions. It had been stated, without contradiction, in a number of papers, including the New York "Times," that the President deliberately timed his declaration to appear an hour before the White House visit of the Messrs. Lamont, Lewis, Young and others. It seemed that it could not have been "timed" without previous knowledge that the subject would be brought up. However, Mr. Brandt's assurance that his was not a "planted" question is enough.

TOMLINSON DEFENDS ROPE SHOOT TITLE

By Louis Tomlinson

Preliminary to the start of the basketball games between Bristol and the New Jersey School for the Deaf tonight, the fourth annual Rope Shoot contest was held by Bristol High's gym team under the direction of Coach Steve Juenger. And the winner for the third time in the four years was Walt Tomlinson of the Senior class.

Tomlinson was given extremely tough competition with six other contestants, five especially. Of the six, Dick Doyle, one of the best gymnasts on the local team, lasted the longest. Doyle pushed the title defender to 8.10 before missing out on that mark, which Walt went over on the second attempt of three trials for each mark.

The six contestants consisted of Harry Seibold, of the Senior class; John Vandenberg, of the Junior class; Dick Doyle, of the Junior class; John Switzer, of the Junior class; Harry Hinman, of the Senior class, and Walt Tomlinson of the Senior class.

Switzer was the first to drop out, having missed at the starting height of six feet. The bar was raised to 8.02 before the next contestant, Harry Seibold, missed. This was just two inches short of the record of 8.04, held jointly by Bill Gallagher and Walt Tomlinson.

John Vandenberg and Harry Hinman both broke the record before they missed out on the 8.05 mark, while the last challenger, Dick Doyle, just missed the 8.10 mark which the defender cleared to win the title and to break his former joint record of 8.04 by six inches. In attempting to clear 9.00 to raise the record height, Tomlinson missed but received the plaudits of the crowd when presented with the plaque in defense of title.

In 1935, the first year such a contest was ever staged by the gym team, Tomlinson and Gallagher jointly held the title by clearing the bar at 7.05. This was broken by Gallagher the following year when he hopped over the bar at the height of 8.04 to win undisputed possession of the plaque. Last year Tomlinson equaled that record to regain the title although Gallagher did not compete. Again this year, Gallagher did not compete and Tomlinson successfully defended his title by clearing the bar at 8.10.

The record to date stands as follows:

Year	Winner	Height
1935—Gallagher
	Tomlinson—jointly	7.05
1936—Gallagher		8.04
1937—Tomlinson		8.04
1938—Tomlinson		8.10

Behemoth of Basketball

By BURNLEY

One of those sport immortals who happen along once in a generation is Stanford's Hank Luisetti, kingpin of the basketball courts.

Handsome Hank is far and away the most spectacular player in the collegiate cage ranks. For the last two years he has been the leading scorer by a wide margin, ringing up the phenomenal total of 826 points during that period.

Luisetti can cage the big leather apple from any angle, and with one hand or two. His astounding success with the one-handed shot has brought that style of play into vogue in all sections of the land.

Hank gave one of the greatest one-man exhibitions of all time on the Indian's recent road trip when he beat Duquesne almost single-handed, cracking the individual scoring record.

Next June, when Luisetti graduates, he will not go in for pro basketball or coaching. Lanky Hank has a job waiting for him in California for which he says his college course in economics has prepared him.

The court cyclone hails from the famous Cow Hollow district of San Francisco which produced DiMaggio, Lazzari and Crosetti.

BRISTOL CELTICS LOSE GAME BY SINGLE POINT

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 24.—The Bristol Celtics gave the Trenton Hungarians their stiffest contest of the season on the latter's court, Hudson and Genesee streets, but lost out in the final few seconds of the tilt. Score was 24-23.

The Bristol team was leading by one point with but ten seconds left to play when "Johnny" Chorb, flashy Hungarian forward, made a shot from beyond the center of the floor.

It was the eighteenth straight triumph for the "Huns" who were led in scoring by Fisher and Corba. For the Delamans, the playing of "Charlie" Hughes and Joe Gallagher stood out.

be finally adopted. Anyone desiring to see the proposed draft may do so at the office in the Fire House.

The proposed expenditures appear enormous but this, the first budget, came at a time when the borough is about to begin the biggest highway improvement project in its history, as well as a $120,000 electric plant improvement program.

The biggest single item of expense is the capital outlay at the electric plant which entails the expenditure of $122,500 for expansion and improvements. Operation and maintenance of the plant adds another $44,000 to the annual expenses of the department.

Permanent streets will cost the borough $34,000 according to the estimates and maintenance of streets and bridges will approximate $12,000.

Fire and police protection will cost the borough $448,84 and health and sanitation which includes garbage collection will add $965 to the annual expenses.

Estimated receipts for borough purposes include $20,000 on the current tax levy, $5000 from taxes levied in prior years and $6500 from miscellaneous sources. Provisions are also provided for short term loans approximating $15,000 and for the transfer of $10,000 from the Light Department to the borough department. Estimated receipts in the electric department include revenue from sale of current, $83,000, and short term loans approximating $75,000. The budget shows a balance in the electric department of $35,250 which is available for 1938 expenses.
